International Refugee Law Course

Special Edition

Sanremo, 21 - 26 October 2019

The Global Compact on Refugees (GCR) calls for a stronger, fairer response to large refugee movements and protracted situations. It highlights the need of a comprehensive refugee response framework, guided by the principles of international cooperation and responsibility sharing, where States and other relevant actors become partners towards the achievement of durable solutions for refugees.

The International Institute of Humanitarian Law, as a reputable institution dedicated to the training of government officials on refugee issues since 1982, wishes to share the agenda and contribute to the collective outcome of the GCR.

Thanks to the support of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR), the Institute is launching the 100th International Refugee Law Course - Special Edition, with a focus on the GCR.

Audience

The 100th Course is tailored and dedicated to representatives of national governmental training institutions and academics from the Global South.

Goals

- Enhance the capacity of national governmental training institutions to embed the principles and areas in need of support of the GCR in their training programmes and modules;
- Empower national governmental training officials and academics to:
  - Raise awareness on and advocate for the protection of refugees
  - Enhance and develop sound and sustainable training programmes, in methodology and topics, in line with the GCR
  - Ensure that their training programmes incorporate content conforming with the GCR
  - Harmonize the training approach and areas of focus among national governmental training institutions
- Exchange of best practices and peer-to-peer support to enhance existing programme development and implementation mechanisms at the local level.
- Identify areas of cooperation between national governmental training institutions at the regional level.

Curricula and methodology

The curricula focuses on the key elements of refugee protection, ranging from the legal framework to refugee participation and solutions. It covers the principles, objectives and programme of action set by the GCR and allows participants to strengthen their teaching skills and capacity to develop training modules through sessions devoted to instructional design and learning methodologies (e.g. needs assessments, and identification of approaches, objectives, methodologies, and evaluations).

The Course strikes a balance between theory and practice and is delivered through a participatory and creative teaching methodology. Participants will be engaged in case studies, role plays, group discussions and simulations and will interact with practitioners and experts in the field of international protection.

Dates and venue

The Course will take place on five days and a half, starting on Monday 21 October in the morning and concluding on Saturday 26 October at noon. It will be held at Villa Ormond, the headquarters of the Institute in Sanremo, Italy.
